Introduction

For the last few years, the Commission has strengthened its efforts to incorporate the questions related to migration and asylum in its political dialogue with third countries, propose comprehensive approaches to migration and mainstream these questions in its development cooperation strategies. As regards cooperation, and in parallel to the contribution of the geographical instruments, the Commission has been funding actions also through thematic instruments, such as the "Aeneas" programme (2004-2006), which followed the preparatory actions financed from the budget heading B7-667 between 2001 and 2003. The aim of these thematic instruments is to assist third countries in their efforts to better manage migratory flows. Initially created to cover the period 2004-2008, 'Aeneas' was shortened to three years (2004-2006), during which about € 120 million of migration related projects have been financed. Within the framework of the Financial Perspectives 2007-2013, 'Aeneas' has been replaced by the Thematic Programme on cooperation with third countries in the areas of migration and asylum.

The general objectives of this Thematic Programme and its areas of activity are laid down in Article 16 of Regulation (EC) No 1905/2006 establishing a financing instrument for development cooperation (DCI), and specifically aim to support third countries in their efforts to ensure better management of migratory flows in all their dimensions. While the subject of the Thematic Programme is primarily migration to the Community, it also takes into account the relevant south/south migratory flows. At the thematic level, the programme covers major fields of action, which correspond to the main aspects of the migratory phenomenon, namely:

(a) fostering the links between migration and development, especially by encouraging the contribution of diasporas to the development of their country of origin and increasing the benefits of migrants' return; mitigating brain drain and promoting the circular movement of skilled migrants; facilitating financial transfers of migrants to their country of origin; supporting voluntary return and reintegration of migrants and building capacities for migration management; fostering capacity building efforts to help countries in the formulation of pro-development migration policies and in their capacity to jointly manage migration flows;

(b) promoting well-managed labour migration, in particular by informing about legal migration and conditions of entry in and stay on the territory of the Member States of the Community; providing information on labour migration opportunities and needs in Member States and on qualifications of third country candidates for migration; supporting pre-departure training for candidates for legal migration; and encouraging the definition and implementation of legislative frameworks for migrant workers in third countries;

(c) fighting illegal immigration and facilitating the readmission of illegal immigrants, including between third countries, and in particular, fighting smuggling and trafficking in human beings; discouraging illegal immigration and raising awareness of the risks related to it; improving capacities in the areas of border, visa and passport management, including the security of documents and the introduction of biometric data, and detection of forged documents; implementing effectively readmission agreements concluded with the Community and obligations arising out of international agreements; and assisting third countries in the management of illegal immigration and in the coordination of their policies;

(d) protecting migrants, including the most vulnerable such as women and children against exploitation and exclusion through measures such as developing third countries' legislation in the field of migration; supporting integration and non-discrimination as well as measures to protect migrants from racism and xenophobia; preventing and fighting the smuggling and trafficking in human beings, and any form of slavery;

(e) promoting asylum and international protection, including through regional protection programmes, in particular in strengthening institutional capacities; supporting the registration of asylum applicants and refugees; promoting international standards and instruments on the protection of refugees; supporting the improvement of reception conditions and local integration, and working towards lasting solutions.

This publication presents the first collection of projects financed by the Thematic Programme in 2007 and 2008. Fifty four projects were selected through the Call for Proposals 2007-2008 and nine additional projects were financed through direct awards<sup>1</sup>. An overview of all projects financed during this period is presented, followed by a summary description of each project. The duration of projects and some implementation details (such as activities, results, and implementing partners) may vary or change during their evolution.

A Mid-term Review of the Thematic Programme is currently being carried out by a team of experts external to the European Commission and should be available in the course of 2010.
